

I don't really like myself.

I don't like my slender,
small eyes.

But I like them always see my emotion and
find the hidden me.

I don't like my big, flat nose.

A stylized illustration of a mother and child touching noses. The mother, on the left, has a large, round face with rosy cheeks and a gentle smile. She is wearing a blue top. The child, on the right, is smaller with a similar rosy face and is wearing a red and white striped shirt. They are both looking at each other with their noses touching. A small yellow starburst is at the point of contact. The background is a soft purple with a large, dark grey tree trunk on the right and a blue patterned blanket with yellow stars and crescent moons at the bottom right. The text is in the upper right corner.

But I like when
we touch noses
to say
good night.

I don't like
my ugly braces, and teeth.

But I like seeing them when you smile and laugh.

I don't like my
big, flappy ears.

But I like
when they listen
closely to stories I tell.

我们小
时候
呀...

I don't like
my huge toes
and arched feet.

But I like
how they stand
and climb.

I don't like
my bumpy
face and freckles.

WOOF!

Woof
woof!

I still don't like
many things
of myself.

And that's FINE!!!

I still can love myself.
